PRESS RELEASE

New Berlin, WI June 2, 2011 – Ed Vesbach, an employee of Joe Wilde Company, Inc., was honored as the 2011 Technician of the Year at the recent International Garage Door Exposition held in Indianapolis.

Hired as the company's first installer/technician on October 15, 1950, Ed has worked for the company for the past 60 years and remains a valued member of the Joe Wilde team at the age of 90. Still working one day a week, Ed provides the company and its customers with a unique service, analyzing and repairing virtually any operator-related product that has ever existed in the industry.

His passion for the job has been contagious, caught by other family members, including his son Brian, who has been with the company 32 years himself.

The expo is an annual trade show and exposition sponsored by the International Door Association (IDA) whose mission is to provide programs and services to door and access systems dealers for the express purpose of enhancing their value and professionalism. The exposition is attended by thousands of industry professionals from throughout the world. More information on IDA can be found at www.doors.org.
